

NEW ABSTRACT

An optical lens component includes a lens element with a mounting portion. The mounting portion has spaced parallel surfaces that extend perpendicularly to the optical axis of the lens element. At least one of the spaced parallel surfaces is provided with a light-scattering structure for coupling out light entering the mounting portion. A light absorber is provided to absorb light scattered from the light-scattering structure.